

ANZCO Foods Scholarships

Each year ANZCO Foods awards four scholarships for up to $5,000 each for up to three years' tertiary study or an apprenticeship.

How it works

The four scholarships are available to immediate family of waged ANZCO employees, who work at our processing or manufacturing sites. This includes children, step-children, spouses/partners and direct whānau of employees, or other immediate family members that ANZCO accepts as eligible.

The recipients need to be studying at a New Zealand university or polytechnic, or completing an apprenticeship in New Zealand.

The scholarship selection committee comprises:

- CEO
- Group Manager Communications and Sustainability
- GM People and Capability

What will it cover

The scholarship will cover costs associated with the course/activity (living expenses, course fees, books, practicals, tools and equipment).

At the end of each year the scholarship recipients will need to provide a written update on their year's study and results, or for apprenticeship activities they've completed during the year.

Scholarship funding for the second and third years is contingent on the recipient passing the previous year/successfully completing their apprenticeship requirements.

Scholarship recipients may also be offered paid holiday work at ANZCO Foods. We will endeavour to make the holiday work relevant to the recipients' area of study, but this may not always be possible.

FAQs

What can I use the scholarship money for?

Anything to do with your study including living expenses, course fees, books, practicals, tools and equipment.

Why is it available to waged staff only?

We are making this offer to immediate family of our waged team in the first instance as this is where we felt we could make the most difference. In the future we may look at extending it.

How do I apply?

Applications forms are available at site reception areas and you can also apply online at ANZCO Foods' website:

➡ www.anzcofoods.com/scholarship

Who is able to apply for the scholarships?

The four scholarships are available to immediate family of waged ANZCO employees, who work at our processing or manufacturing sites. This includes children, step-children, spouses/partners and direct whānau of employees, or other immediate family members that ANZCO accepts as eligible.

What if all the ANZCO Foods scholarships aren't awarded – will you extend it to the immediate family of salaried employees?

Not at this stage.

Who decides who will get the scholarships?

A panel of four people including, the CEO, the Group Manager Communications and Sustainability, and the GM People and Capability.

Does the area of study need to align to ANZCO's business?

No – the scholarships are for any tertiary study (university or polytechnic) or a trade.

What do I have to do be considered?

You will need to have been accepted into your course/apprenticeship and ideally have a good history of achievement at school.

What do I need to provide to be considered?

You need to be a family member of a waged employee and provide all of the requested material:

- A cover letter-style profile about yourself
- Your most recent academic record/an outline of your apprenticeship requirements
- Two written reference letters

If I'm awarded an ANZCO Foods scholarship, can I apply for/accept scholarships from other people or other organisations?

Our preference would be that you accept only one scholarship to ensure as many people as possible can access help for their study or training.
